DAYTONA BEACH.

DAYTONA BEACH, May 19.—The Junior choir of the Methodist church will give a sacred concert Sunday evening under the leadership of Mrs. Drake, the regular evening services being dispensed with. The entire evening will be devoted to song. An excellent program is promised; the choir are holding rehearsals every evening this week and are sure to acquit themselves creditably. This is their first attempt, and they should be encouraged by a large congregation. The Junior choir, which is a comparatively new organization, is highly appreciated by the pastor and the church workers as a means of interesting the younger society set in church attendance.

An Excellent Discourse.—

Rev. John Treadwell, pastor of the M. E. church, on Sunday morning delivered a message of deep and earnest import before the graduating class of the Seabreeze-Daytona high school. By his eloquence and reasoning he held the close attention of the students and of the large congregation in attendance. His opening quotation was from John II, "I write young men unto you because you are strong." He dwelt upon the potential strength of youth, which is developed through dreams and ideals and the broadening of their vision. Another thought given was that their work had just begun. This graduation was just a promotion along the long line: from the high school to the university—from the university to the world of workers, which is the university of life. The church was beautifully decorated in the class colors, pink and green. In the decoration the pink oleander blossoms were used in rich profusion. Music by the choir was very appropriate and inspirational of the hour.

Hon. Ed. Pierce and wife closed their winter home on the Halifax and left last Thursday for their summer home in Fargo, S. D.

The improvements at the Palm are now completed. The new sidewalk and store foundation adds as much to the appearance of the exterior as the enlarged dining room and better kitchen facilities give greater comfort and convenience to the guests and the proprietor. The dining room has a seating capacity for 50. The walls have been redecorated and the woodwork touched up with fresh paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Treadwell, of St. Augustine, and Harry Treadwell, of New Smyrna, spent Sunday with their parents, Rev. John Treadwell and wife, at the parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. George Beardsley closed their winter home on Halifax avenue and left Saturday afternoon for Jacksonville, homeward bound, for Detroit, Mich.

W. C. Spinney, barber on Seabreeze avenue, and wife, are among the departing winter residents of this week.

Here is a tragic and remarkable picture of the horror and death of the battlefield as seen by women. The dead and wounded are lying where they have been felled by the Russian bullets in the Carpathians. Austrian Red Cross nurses are seen active at their work of mercy and relief.

They returned to Boston, Mass., for the summer.

At a special meeting of the Daytona Beach council, Wednesday night, the contract to supply the town of Seabreeze with water for five years was discussed, and the amendments offered by the Seabreeze council accepted, after which the council adjourned to attend in a body, the meeting being held by the Seabreeze council at the same hour.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Phillips, winter residents of Peninsula drive, left on Monday to spend the summer at their old home town, Middleborough, Vt. They expect to be back in Daytona Beach by October.

Magruder, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Detwyler, of Orlando, drove over in their car, Sunday, and were guests at the Breakers for their Sunday dinner.

The Seaside Inn will open to the public the first week in June. Mrs. H. F. Stewart will move over from her cottage at Seabreeze to the Inn this week.

Mrs. M. F. Barnes received word of the marriage of her sister, Miss Bessie Alice Justice, to Howard D. LeFevre. They were married last Thursday evening at Lake Helen and are now on a trip in the southern part of the state. Mr. and Mrs. LeFevre will visit Mrs. Barnes a few days before going north to visit her mother in Bethel, Ohio.

THE BABY

By OLIVE BARTON.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The great singer was spending her short vacation in an unusual way. It might be said also that it had been none of her own choosing. What did she know of baby food, or mending holes in Johnnie's stockings as big as buckwheat cakes? How did she know how many days Flossie should wear the same petticoat?

The whole three were in bed now, and the great singer relaxed luxuriously. She knew no one in the town, so there was little danger of callers.

Her thoughts were as busy as the fingers of the little maid of all work, now doing dishes audibly in the kitchen. She was thinking how odd it was for her to be there at all.

A telegram had been responsible. Sister Jane and her husband William had been called away by trouble in William's family. There had been no one else to ask to look after the children. She had never even seen the baby!

Steps suddenly sounded on the little front porch like so many bangs on a bass drum. Tillie, out in the kitchen, heard and was at the door before her temporary mistress could stop her.

"Is this where Miss Farrell is staying?" asked a man's voice.

"Joe!" exclaimed Miss Farrell impatiently. "Will he never learn that there isn't a bit of use in chasing after me, wherever I go?"

Joe stamped off the snow noisily and came inside. He came in big, glowing and clumsy. The little room seemed full before he got farther than the doorway. Peggy, in her chair before the fire, half turned—just enough for him to see the top-loftical expression.

"Peggy!" he exclaimed delightedly, coming forward.

"Good evening, Joe," evenly. "You chose a nice night to come so far. Won't you sit down?"

Joe sat down on the other side of the fireplace. "You look awfully sweet, Peggy. Aren't you glad to see me?"

"No!" deliberately.

"I—I wouldn't have come—only I thought of something after—after we'd been talking the other night."

She didn't answer.

"You see," shifting uneasily, "if you would marry me, you could go ahead with your singing just the same as ever. You could sing just as well as Margaret Farrell Sturtevant, as you can as Margaret Farrell. Now, couldn't you? That wouldn't be interfering with your career, would it? and, Peggy, you used to care a little for me!"

She watched the fire a minute, relenting. "It's hard to be cross with you, Joe. You just won't let people, will you? I'm going to be extra nice now and explain."

"You see, Joe, your plan won't work for a hundred reasons. You love a home. You're a regular home man if there ever was one. I can't make a home. It isn't in me. I hate everything about a house. I love my music better than anything on earth, and I can't give it up."

What she really meant was that the intoxication of public homage was a sensation she would not care to renounce.

"All right, my girl, you're the doctor!" Joe got up and looked at his watch. "I didn't suppose it was much use, but I thought I'd make one more try. I won't bother you again, ever. Good-night, Peggy, I've just time for my train."

He was gone! Peggy turned out the light and sat watching the fire.

"I guess I'll get the baby her bottle and go to bed," she yawned.

A week passed. Peggy was getting expert on mending kneeless stockings, sorting clothes and bathing babies. It never seemed to be a labor any more.

Then one night the baby got sick, very sick.

The doctor and trained nurse hastily summoned took it philosophically, saying there was an equal chance of life and death. But Peggy, a poor, white, stricken thing, never leaving the side of the little crib, thought the world was ending.

Morning brought a change for the better. The baby would live! Peggy slipped silently away to her room and sat thinking in the cold, wintry dawn.

Mr. Joseph Sturtevant was just settling himself for a nice winter's morning nap. The telephone rang. He was awake in an instant.

"Is that you, Joe? This is Peggy! I have changed my mind. And that's all I'm going to tell you until you come out and hear for yourself!"

Wasn't Only One With Religion.

"Yassah!" triumphantly said old Brother Cuddyhump. "De revival was a glorious success! 'Twuz a high day in Zion and de hozanners o' de redeemed was ringin' loud and c'lar, and dar wasn't no trouble a-tall twell a newcome brudder—smaht scoun'el dat moved over yuh fum Tumlinville dese recent—gunter shout th'oo a meggy-phone dat de Lawd had done saved him fum his sins.

"Dat's all right, muh brudder, hollerer Pahson Bagster, 'but yo'll hatter 'spence wid dat hawn! Yo' isn't de on'y pussen yuh dat ha been purloined fum deir sins, and yo' wants to give de rest o' us a chance to brag a little, too!"—Kansas City Star.

Chill Poor Country for Stock.

Stock raising in Chili does not seem to be keeping pace with the general development of the country, owing to the fact that better use can be made of the land, since beef cattle can be brought from Argentina cheaply. Then the ravages of tuberculosis, carbuncles, fever, etc., and the large number of deaths during droughts in unirrigated sections of the country tend to make the business unprofitable.

Papal Consistory.

In a consistory the pope and cardinals are seated in a circle. At the pope's right hand sits the senior cardinal bishop, beyond whom are the others of that order, according to seniority. After the last cardinal bishop comes the senior cardinal priest, and so on through that order. Finally, after the last cardinal priest comes not the senior but the junior cardinal deacon, and so on in reverse order, finishing with the senior deacon at the left hand of the pope.

Clean-up week was very generally observed in Ormond during the past few days, the town council abetting the efforts of the civic committee in every way possible. The heavy rains and winds, however, made it necessary to do a great deal of the street work over again.

The Wiles and Nelson Musical Comedy company had a four nights' run at the town hall last week, with a fair attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. James Carnell are in Jacksonville for a few days, going up on Sunday last.

Mrs. James E. Francis is convalescing at her home on Palmetto street. Her son, Dr. Nelson W. Francis, was down from Jacksonville the latter part of last week for a visit to his mother and sister, and was delighted with the gain his mother is making.

Avoid Fretting.

The moment I fret about a thing I am its slave instead of its master. And there is no slave-master in the world like worry. Another master may grudge the dinner hour, but he must give you time for sleep. Another master may grudge the dinner hour, but some time you must eat. But worry will work you twenty-four hours a day and spoil your appetite into the bargain.—Mark Guy Pearse.

GEORGIA GOVERNOR-ELECT HARRIS AND WIFE RETURN HOME

Hon. N. E. Harris, governor-elect of Georgia, and Mrs. Harris left Wednesday morning for their home in Macon, after spending some time at their winter home on Palmetto avenue, Daytona Beach. Mrs. Harris was here during the greater part of the past season. The governor-elect came down a fortnight ago, since which time he had been engaged in working out the draft of his inaugural address, to be delivered at the Georgia capital, Atlanta, on June 26th, when he will be formally inducted into the office of chief executive of the state.

Judge Harris anticipates that he will be a very busy man this summer, as the Georgia legislature, which convenes annually and remains in session 50 days, will meet next month. Besides this, the incoming executive will "inherit" from Hon. John M. Slaton, the present governor, a considerable amount of unfinished business that will have to be disposed of during the summer.

One of the vexing problems which the new governor will, it is now believed, be called upon to solve is that growing out of the case of Leo M. Frank, under death sentence for the murder of Mary Phagan, the little pencil-factory girl of Atlanta. Upon Judge Harris will fall the unpleasant duty of deciding whether Frank shall live or die; but Judge Harris' record as a soldier, public servant and private citizen stamps him as a man who will not flinch when confronted with the necessity of performing an unpleasant task.

It may be safely stated that Frank's fate rests solely upon the chief executive's decision as to the prisoner's guilt or innocence and whether or not he had a fair trial.

Mrs. Scheffel S. Wright entertained very delightfully at cards, Tuesday afternoon at her home, 68 Third avenue. The first prize at 500, which was a gold tray, was secured by Mrs. C. G. Hendricks, and the second prize, a box of stationery, was won by Miss M. Ella DeVoy.

Punch was served throughout the afternoon and at the conclusion of the card games a salad course was served and this was followed by an ice and coffee.

The rooms were very prettily decorated for the event, yellow field daisies and lilies predominating.

Mrs. Wright was assisted in receiving the guests by her mother, Mrs. M. P. Leatherman, of Louisville, Ky., who has been spending the season here, and Mrs. R. D. Craig assisted Mrs. Wright in serving.
